On the Contributors

Charo B. D’Etcheverry is an associate professor in the Department of East Asian Languages and Literature at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. Her study of late Heian court tales, Love After the Tale of Genji: Rewriting the World of the Shining Prince (Harvard University Asia Center, 2007), was published this spring. She is currently working on a book provisionally titled Sagoromo and Asukai: A Love Story in Five Genres and Six Acts, a history of the reception of The Tale of Sagoromo’s most popular subplot.

Monika Dix is a visiting assistant professor of Japanese in the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at the University of Hawai’i at Mānoa. She received her Ph.D. in Japanese literature from the University of British Columbia with a dissertation titled “Writing Women into Religious Histories: Re-reading Representations of Chūjōhime in Medieval Japanese Buddhist Narratives” in 2006. From 2006-2007 she was a postdoctoral fellow at the Sainsbury Institute for the Study of Japanese Arts and Cultures in London. Her recent publications include: “The Possibilities of Translation: The Text-Image Relationship in Chūjōhime no honji,” in Ii Haruki, ed., Nihon bungaku: hon’yaku no kansei (Kasama Shobo, 2004); and “Japanese Woodblock Prints: Suzuki Harunobu’s Beauties of the Green Houses,” P Di̇nya Sanatı Dergisi, no. 34 (2004). She is currently working on a book provisionally titled Chūjōhime in Retrospective: Buddhist Ideology as Gender Marginalization/Empowerment, which is based on her dissertation.

David Eason is a full-time lecturer in the Department of East Asian Studies at the University at Albany, State University of New York. The recipient of a Japan Foundation Doctoral Fellowship in 2005 and a Visiting Foreign Researcher at Waseda University during 2005-2006, he specializes in medieval and early modern legal and cultural history with a specific focus on conflict and dispute resolution. He is currently in the final stages of completing his doctoral dissertation in the Department of History at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Kimura Saeko is an associate professor in the Department of International and Cultural Studies at Tsuda College, Tokyo. She received her Ph.D. from Tokyo University with a dissertation titled “Mothers, Women, Acolytes: The History of Sexuality from Ancient to Medieval Times in Japan.” Her recent publications include “The Visible and the Invisible: Imagination of the Hachiman Deity” (Mieru mono to mienai mono: Hachiman shinzō no kōsōryoku), Monogatari kenkyū, no. 7 (2007), and “Mediumistic Narrative of Hōjō Masako: Faith for Hachiman in Soga monogatari” (Hōjō Masako no miko gatari: Soga monogatari no Hachiman shinkō), Gengotai, no. 7 (2007).

Christina Laffin is an assistant professor in the Department of Asian Studies at the University of British Columbia. She received her Ph.D. at Columbia University in 2005 with a dissertation on travel writing by medieval Japanese women and is presently completing a manuscript on the works of Nun Abutsu. She has co-edited The Noh Ominameshi: A Flower Viewed from Many Directions (Cornell East Asia Series, 2003), and served as managing editor for Gender and Japanese History (Osaka University Press, 1999). Recent publications include an article on women and travel writing in Kokubungaku (July 2006) and contributions to Traditional Japanese Literature, An Anthology, Beginnings to 1600 (Columbia University Press, 2007).

Naito Mariko is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Language and Information Sciences at the University of Tokyo, Japan. She is currently a visiting fellow at the Harvard-Yenching Institute. Her recent publications include: “Poems Immemorial: The Mechanism of Honkadori” (Kioku ni nai hodo furui uta: honkadori no mondai kisei), Gengotai, no. 7 (2007); and “The Concept of Time in the Literary Criticism of Medieval Poetry” (Chūsei karon ni okeru jikan: mirai no kioku no tame ni), Monogatari kenkyū, no. 5 (2006).

Herbert Plutschow is an honorary professor at the University of California Los Angeles and professor at Jōsai International University. He specializes in Japanese literature and cultural history. His publications include: Introducing Kyoto (Kōdansha, 1978); Rediscovering Rikyu and the Beginnings of the Japanese Tea Ceremony (Global Oriental, 2003); Edo-Period Travel Diaries—Documents of an Edo-Period Enlightenment and Universality (Edo no tabi Nikki—Tokugawa keimōki no hakubitsugakusha katchi) (Shūeisha Shinshō, 2005); A Reader in Edo Period Travel (Global Oriental, 2006); and Philipp Franz von Siebold and the Opening of Japan: A Re-evaluation (Global Oriental, 2007).

Edith Sarra is associate professor of East Asian Languages and Cultures, and adjunct associate professor of Comparative Literature and Gender Studies at Indiana University, Bloomington. Her publications include Fictions of Femininity: Literary Inventions of Gender in Japanese Court Women’s Memoirs (Stanford University Press, 1999); “Unruly Tales From a Dutiful Daughter,” in Rebecca L. Copeland and Esperanza Ramirez-Christensen, eds., Father/Daughter Plots: Japanese Literary Women and the Eiji Sekine is associate professor of Japanese at Purdue University. He is the author of Erasure of the Other: Yoshiyuki Junnosuke and Modern Literature (“Tasha”no shōkyo: Yoshiyuki Junnosuke to kindai bungaku) (Keiso Shobō, 1993) and the editor of Echo of Poetry and Desire for Narrative (Uta no hibiki, monogatari no yokubō) (Shinwasha, 1996). His papers published in English and Japanese include: “Writing the Limits of Sexuality: Tomioka Taeko’s ‘Straw Dogs’ and Nakagami Kenji’s ‘The Immortal,’” Proceedings of the Association for Japanese Literary Studies, vol. 2 (Summer 2001) and “The Ball in Edo: Pierre Loti, Akutagawa Ryūnosuke, and Yamada Fūtarō” (Edo no butōkai: Piēru Loti, Akutagawa Ryūnosuke, Yamada Fūtarō), Kokubungaku kaishaku to kanshō (January 2005). He is Editor/Secretary of the Association for Japanese Literary Studies and has edited a number of issues of the association’s proceedings.

Kyoko Selden is senior lecturer in Japanese in the Department of Asian Studies at Cornell University. Her translations include The Atomic Bomb: Voices from Hiroshima and Nagasaki (M.E. Sharpe, 1989); Japanese Women Writers: Twentieth Century Short Fiction (with Noriko Mizuta, M. E. Sharpe, 1991); Kayano Shigeru, Our Land Was a Forest: An Ainu Memoir (co-translator, Westview Press, 1996); The Funeral of a Giraffe: Seven Stories by Tomioka Taeko (with Noriko Mizuta, M. E. Sharpe, 2000); and Honda Katsuichi, Harukor: An Ainu Woman’s Tale (University of California Press, 2000). She was guest editor of the December 2004 issue of the Review of Japanese Culture and Society (Women’s Voices, Past and Present: Twelve Japanese Stories). She is the editor of Annotated Japanese Literary Gems (Cornell East Asia Series), of which two volumes have appeared.